Far More Than a Common Law School

LSU Law is far more than a common law school. We like to say, “We’re a law school that’s on the move.” The LSU Law Center remained solidly positioned among the top 100 American law schools in rankings released on April 15. The 2011 U.S. News and World Report Best Graduate Schools rankings placed the Center at 80th nationally, down slightly from the previous rankings in 2010.

You ask, “What does the LSU Law Center offer that is different from other law schools?”

Our answer:

At LSU Law, you’ll receive a legal education that is demanding yet personal. It’s a place that offers guidance to help you chart your course, and an education that prepares you for practice or service in Louisiana or beyond our borders in the global workplace. And finally, LSU Law offers a great education at a great value. The tuition advantage that we enjoy over private university peers has become even more dramatic over the past decade.

In terms of Curriculum, you’ll receive preparation in the common law—similar to that provided in other American law schools. But, at LSU Law, you’ll also study and receive an additional degree that recognizes your preparation in the civil law—a blend of Roman, Spanish, and French legal traditions.

Our answer:

At LSU Law, you’ll receive a legal education that is demanding yet personal. It’s a place that offers guidance to help you chart your course, and an education that prepares you for practice or service in Louisiana or beyond our boarders in the global workplace. And finally, LSU Law offers a great education at a great value. The tuition advantage that we enjoy over private university peers has become even more dramatic over the past decade.

In terms of Curriculum, you’ll receive preparation in the common law—similar to that provided in other American law schools. But, at LSU Law, you’ll also study and receive an additional degree that recognizes your preparation in the civil law—a blend of Roman, Spanish, and French legal traditions.
The 'Insert/edit link' dialog box will appear, enter the desired hyperlink into the 'Link URL' field.

If the link is to a local page (a page on the LSU Law website), you only need to include the index.cfm... portion of the address. For example: If linking to 'http://www.law.lsu.edu/index.cfm?geaux=newsandpublications2.utm', you would only need to enter 'index.cfm?geaux=newsandpublications2.utm' into the 'Link URL' field.

If the link is to an off-site page, such as http://www.legis.state.la.us/, you would enter the entire URL into the 'Link URL' field.
